“Big Mail: from Public Good to Private Profit”

DIANE DEBLOIS and ROBERT DALTON HARRIS

Bio: Diane DeBlois and Robert Dalton Harris have together, for over a decade, edited the Postal History Journal, for which they won The American Philatelic Congress 2004 and 2014 Diane D. Boehret Award. They also, separately and jointly, have written on a broad range of subjects for other philatelic and collecting periodicals, and are both in the Philatelic Writers Hall of Fame. Robert has won The American Philatelic Congress 1995, and with Diane the 2008, C. Corwith Wagner Award and the 2008 J. Hess Barr Award.

As independent scholars they have spoken on their postal historical research at international conferences (business history, economics) and eight of the previous postal history symposia. They have taught six different courses on postal history at the American Philatelic Society’s Summer Seminar. For over 30 years they have been full-time dealers in ephemera (aGatherin’) specializing in all aspects of communications history.
