“The Eagle, the Rocket, and the Moon: US Postal Iconography at the End of History”

LAURA GOLDBLATT and RICHARD HANDLER

Bio: Currently an Assistant Professor in the Department of English and General Faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Virginia, Laura Goldblatt earned her Ph.D. and M.A. (both English Language and Literature) at the University of Virginia and her B.A. (English with Honors) at Wesleyan University. Richard Handler is a Professor in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Virginia. He completed his Ph.D. and M.A. (Cultural Anthropology) at the University of Chicago and his B.A. (English Literature) at Columbia University.

Among the recent publications co-authored by Ms. Goldblatt and Mr. Handler are the book The American Stamp: Postal Iconography, Democratic Citizenship and Consumerism in the United States (Columbia University Press, due early 2023); “Pray for Peace but Fight Your Insect Enemies: US Postal Messaging and Cold War Propaganda” (article in Amerikastudien, 2020); and “Toward a New National Iconography: Native Americans on United States Postage Stamps, 1847-1922” (article in Winterthur Portfolio, 2017).